HERE'S WHY BUSINESSES FAIL

- No market need: Startups fail because they create a product or service that customers don't want or need.
- Ran out of cash: Poor financial management and spending are major contributors to failure.
- Not the right team: A lack of the right skills, experience, or a dysfunctional team can lead to failure.
- Competition: Failing to stand out from or compete with existing businesses is a key reason for failure.
- Pricing/Cost issues: Problems with setting the right price point or managing costs can sink a startup.
- Poor product: Issues with the quality or functionality of the product itself can lead to failure.
- Ignored customers: Failing to listen to or respond to customer feedback is a common pitfall.
- Poor sales and marketing: A lack of effective sales strategies and marketing plans can prevent a startup from reaching its target audience.

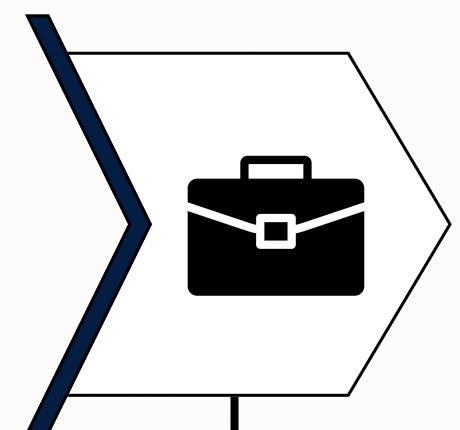

HERE'S HOW WE ADDRESS THESE

- No market need: We will get hands on in market research ensuring that what you are building is needed
- Ran out of cash: You live and die by your Profit and Loss Statement (P&L). We'll set you up with a P&L template that you can use today to start tracking your finances accurately.
- Not the right team: It's not just the team you hire that counts. Networking is going to be what gets you to the next level. We will give you the opportunities and knowledge of how to maximize these events.
- Competition: Understanding your competition is key. We'll dive into this as a part of the market research project that is due at the end of the class.
- Pricing/Cost issues: You know the value of your product or service. But what we will figure out is what someone is willing to pay for it.
- Poor sales and marketing: You will be proficient in a sales and marketing framework that is used by the top companies across the globe (MEDDPICC).
